A Husband with a Pistol

Two shots through a closed bed-room door by a wronged husband at the betrayer of his honor brought to light yesterday afternoon an unfortunate Washington transaction. Dr. Gustavus Brown is a young densist, who has an office in the large, handsome residence just opposite the Shoreham. Dr. Brown bad a room there, where he per-formed dental operations; also, a bed-room,

For some time he has enjoyed the friend-ship of Mrs. G. T. Parker, wife of a well-known agent of a New York shoe firm Mrs. Parker is a handsome, attractive woman of about twenty-five years of ego Soe has been married about five visited Dr. Brown a number of times to ack NO. 111 KING STREET, ALEXANDRIA, VA.

Walter Parker, a younger brother, shad-wed Mrs. Parker is her movements about he city until she went into the house where Dr. Brown has his office. This was about one o'clock yesterday, and young Parker immediately telephoned to his brother. Being joined by the latter the pair made their way into the house, finding all the doors un-locked. They searched all the rooms of the house very quietly, but found no one until they entered the private bedroem of the young dentist, where, seconding to their statement, they discovered the pair in an compromising position. Mr. Parker drew his revolver and began firing at the doctor, who got behind the door of the adjoining room. Parker's shots did no damage, and he and his brother left the house. Mr. Parker has instituted proceedings for divorce.

Dr. Brown denies that any scene occurred in a bed-room. The lady, he said, had just entered his operating room scarcely a moment before the husband entered. He deice all the statements which involve the lady's fair name, and states that be believes the husband's conduct is either an attempt at blackmail or is prompted by a desire to get a diverce from his wife. He is very inng the husband with assault and battery.

The Devil's Den.

The cave near Joseph Dee's in Hamilton county, Fia , known as the Devil's Dan, has ever been a mystery. No one now living has ever explored its depths, and many curious tales are told in connection with it The editor of the Jasper News has gone to it at least half a dozen times, with the express purpose of exploring it, but upon reaching its opening, down in a dark ravine, overshadowed by tall pines and spreading oaks, feeling the cold, chilly current of air that is peculiar to the place, listening to the dripping waters echoing in the cavernous-depths, viewing the everhanging rocks which seem ready to give way and fall, and the impenetrable darkness of the cavern, all combined, bave never failed to produce a feeling of awe, that would soon ripen into fear, and cause him to get away from the place faster than he went

It is related in the early history of the country that Uncle Billy Bassett once happened to pass that way at a late bour in the night. It was britliantly lighted up, and the scuods of muele and revelry were heard therein. He, knowing nothing of the cave, joyfully supposed that he was approaching some house where he could obtain rest for the night. Going down into the ravine he fol lowed its course till upon turning an angle of rock he came full upon the mouth of the cavern, an opening some twelve feet high and twenty wide. He took one look at the cene within, and incontinently fled from the spot with the speed of a fright nted deer. He said that on a high ledge of rock four or five uncouth looking characters were cluster d, making music on ins sumouts that he was now quainted with, while on the floor any number of naked yellow devils seven feet high were dencing with might and main. Ever since that time it has been called the David's Dan.

Another story is that during the war it was occupied as a refuge and highing place for deserters. One of them one day concluded that to pess away the time, which cluded that to pess away the time, which was banging heavily on his hands, the would explore the cave and grades of finish to suit all classes of circumstances. At a distance of seventy or ciahty yards they come across hundreds of eksistens of human beings, which so ter-rified them that they quit the cave entirely, preferring a life in the army to an abode with the dead in that lonely cavero.-Florida Times-Union
